The Peloton Business Model

Peloton, founded in 2012, manufactures and sells two products for customers to use at home when exercising. The first is the Peloton Bike, an indoor cycle with a touchscreen monitor and a starting price of $2 245. The second is the Peloton Treadmill; this has a touchscreen monitor and a starting price of $4 295.

5

Peloton customers pay a monthly subscription of $39. This gives them access to exclusive virtual sport content streamed directly to their monitors where they can compete against other subscribers. If they do not want to compete against others, they can follow a class from the Peloton large fitness and sport library.

The Peloton headquarters is in New York. It has become the largest interactive fitness business in the world and in 2019 became a public limited company. It has customers in the US, Canada, UK and Germany and has recently expanded into Australia.

There has been a huge growth in virtual fitness classes as fewer people attend traditional gyms. This has led to an increase of 153% in Peloton's revenue since March 2020.

Peloton completes takeover of Precor for $420m cash in April 2021

Precor is one of the largest global commercial fitness equipment manufacturers with a large number of sales in the US. Its fitness equipment can be found in hotels, universities and businesses in 90 countries.

With this takeover, Peloton expands its US manufacturing capacity and is able to increase its research and development capabilities with Precor's highly-skilled employees. This is expected to speed up Peloton's penetration of the global commercial market.

Peloton recalling all treadmills

In May 2021, Peloton announced recalls of 126,000 treadmills over safety concerns. The announcement marked a major reversal of Peloton's initial reaction. It comes after weeks of discussions with the US Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) over reports of faults with the Peloton Treadmill. 5

In a statement, Peloton apologised for not acting more quickly after reports of one death and dozens of injuries.

"I want to be clear; Peloton made a mistake in our initial response to the CPSC's request that we recall the Peloton Treadmill," CEO John Foley said. "We should have listened to them from the outset. For that, I apologise." 10

Peloton shares closed nearly 15% down. This wiped $4.1bn from Peloton's market value.

Coca-Cola is giving one of its most popular drinks a makeover

Coca-Cola is changing the recipe for its Coca-Cola Zero Sugar in an effort to make the drink taste more like regular Coke. The Coca-Cola Zero Sugar aluminium can will also look different – all red rather than the present red and black can.

The move comes as Coca-Cola focuses its resources on its trademark products, including Coke, Coca-Cola Zero Sugar and Diet Coke after stopping production of some struggling brands. The company hopes the updated version of Coca-Cola Zero Sugar will attract more consumers. 5

The new version of Coca-Cola Zero Sugar is estimated to replace the current one in the US and Canada in September 2021. 10

Amazon's $20 an hour wages are forcing the jeans maker to rethink employee pay

Levi Strauss and Co. (Levi's) has been selling jeans for 168 years, but 2021 is proving particularly difficult for the business to find employees mainly due to Amazon.

"There's no question that recruitment and retention of labour is challenging right now," said Levi's Chief Executive Officer, Chip Bergh. 5

Levi's is a business that many people want to work for but it is starting to face difficulties in the current US labour market when staffing its retail stores and distribution centres.

"We are considering right now what we have to do with our wage rates going forward," said Chip Bergh. "We have people that live close to Amazon distribution centres and Amazon is not afraid to pay up to $20 an hour." 10

The US minimum wage was last raised in 2009 and is still $7.25 per hour, while Amazon has paid a $15 starting wage since 2018.

A Levi's spokesperson said, "We offer all of our employees the opportunity to work for an iconic brand with strong values, health care and retirement benefits, a bonus programme and more. We believe this package of compensation and benefits will continue to make us an employer of choice." 15
